This questionnaire is designed to give you a chance to reflect on what you're learning, to help us help you meet your goals, and to improve the program. We appreciate your honest responses. Please complete this self-assessment and bring a copy to your advance registration meeting with the chair. Remember also to keep an electronic copy for yourself. As you complete this form in future semesters, you're encouraged to review and build on your earlier answers.

1. Why did you initially chose to minor in Religious Studies? How have the reasons that first drew you to the program changed or deepened as you've progressed through it?
2. No matter which particular courses you've taken, the outcomes we hope for in all RLST minors and majors include the following. For each, reflect on how you're doing so far in meeting these goals, noting the courses, books, and other activities (e.g., discussions with faculty, other minors, or majors; courses outside the department; co-curricular activities) that have helped you:
  - to read and analyze religious texts, whether sacred, classical, or contemporary:
  - to be sensitive to historical and cultural context as they have affected the development of religious traditions:
  - to articulate and defend your own line of interpretation and criticism regarding religious questions and texts:
  - to integrate your current studies with other areas of religious studies and with other related courses outside the major.
3. What are your own goals as a Religious Studies minor? How are you doing in meeting each of them? How has the department helped you, or not helped you, meet them? What would help you meet them more fully?
4. Please add any other comments or questions you have about the minor or your place in it.
