

History Study Abroad Guide

1. What semester/year can/should history students go abroad?

Any time in sophomore year or fall semester of junior year would be good, and history majors should come back for the History research methods class in the spring of their junior year.

2. What are the pre-requisites for studying abroad, if any?

We don't have any pre-requisites.

3. Which programs offer major/minor courses that have been approved in the past? List those courses for each program.

History students have been to Rome, Ireland, and Spain, among others. Many study abroad programs offer history classes, and most of them will count toward our history major. Students just need to check with the department chair before signing up for the course, and send a syllabus if possible. We don't have a record of classes history students have taken abroad.

4. What short-term programs do you recommend?

Any short-term program will be valuable to students, so we recommend all of them.